Report: King Tut statues missing

CAIRO At least 17 artifacts from the Egyptian Museum of Cairo are missing following a break-in, the country's minister of antiquities said Sunday.

The missing objects include a gilded wood statue of King Tutankhamun being carried by a goddess, parts of a gilded wood statue of Tutankhamun harpooning (above), a limestone statue of Akhenaten, a statue of Nefertiti making offerings, a sandstone head of an Amarna princess, a stone statuette of a scribe from Amarna, 11 wooden shabti statuettes of Yuya and a heart scarab of Yuya.

The discovery that the ancient treasures are missing came after museum staff took an inventory, Zahi Hawass said in a statement.

The police and army plan to question people who already are in custody, Hawass said.

Hawass said earlier that "criminals" had broken into the museum in January, not long after protests against President Hosni Mubarak began in Cairo and other major Egyptian cities. Mubarak resigned Friday.

Hawass said Jan. 31 the intruders had vandalized statues and display cases and stolen jewelry from the museum gift shop.

Several suspects were apprehended shortly after the break-in, some of them with antiquities in their possession, Hawass said.

The army and private citizens fanned out to protect Egypt's museums as the unrest spread.

"The Egyptian people are absolutely wonderful," said Jan Summers Duffy, an Egyptologist at the College of Idaho and curator at the Orma J. Smith Museum of Natural History. She said when the break-in was announced that she believed Egyptians can be counted on to defend museums and archaeological sites.

Military now in control

Egypt's new rulers dissolve parliament, suspend the constitution

CNN

CAIRO Egypt's military dissolved the country's parliament and suspended its constitution Sunday following the ouster of longtime leader Hosni Mubarak, telling Egyptians it would be in charge for six months or until elections can be held.

The Supreme Council of the Armed Forces said it would appoint a committee to propose changes to the constitution, which then would be submitted to voters. The council will have the power to issue new laws during the transition period, according to a military statement read on state TV.

Sameh Shoukry, Egypt's ambassador to the U.S., said Sunday that the generals have made restoring security and reviving the economy its top priorities.

"This current composition is basically a technocratic government to run the day-to-day affairs, to take care of the security void

WEEKEND DEVELOPMENTS

Hosni Mubarak stepped down Friday after 18 days of protests against his nearly 30-year rule and now is in the Red Sea resort of Sharm el-Sheikh. The longtime president was himself a product of the military establishment that has ruled Egypt since the 1950s, but his abdication leaves a council of generals led by Defense Minister Hussein Tantawi in charge of the Arab world's most populous nation.

that has happened, and to also address the issues related to the economy," Shoukry said.

However, a leading opposition figure said Sunday that the military must explain its plans in more detail or see a resumption of the demonstrations that drove Mubarak from office.

And a prominent Egyptian activist credited with helping spark the revolution warned against taking too long to establish a new representative government.

"Biggest mistake now is to give the Egyptian people too little too slow. Restoring confidence requires a faster pace," Wael Ghonim said on Twitter.

Sunday's military statement said new elections would be held for both houses of Egypt's parliament as well as the presidency. Protesters had blasted the November parliamentary elections as fraudulent, and calls for their annulment were among the major demands before Mubarak's ouster.

In the meantime, government ministers now are reporting to the military high command in the same way they reported to Mubarak, Prime Minister Ahmed Shafiq told reporters Sunday. He said he was reviewing candidates to fill vacant government ministries, adding that only those who were acceptable to the public would be appointed.

I've rediscovered ecstasy in a bagel

After several months of being homeless, I finally moved into a place in Lincoln Park, and coincidentally it is by a joint called Chicago Bagel Authority.

I'm ignoring those BS rules about journalists not hyping a place in exchange for personal gain, and CBA gives me a very personal gain, which is pure, unadulterated joy bordering on the kind of sexual gratification usually reserved for exiting this temporal world and arriving on a separate plane of existence that major religions have yet to categorize.

Allow me to expound: Chicago Bagel Authority has a twin in Oxford, Ohio, which is the home of my alma mater, Miami University.

Aside from being well-known as a hangout for over-privileged frat rats and sorostitutes who couldn't get into Vanderbilt, Miami has Bagel and Deli. It's pretty simple—all they do is steam their bagel sandwiches, and while you kind of assume someone should have figured this out right around the time they invented the internal combustion engine, it remains unique.

Every time I go back to Miami—which is way too often, bordering on creepy-old-man status—I pack into Bagel and Deli at 2 in the morning and order more bagels than my stomach should be physiologically capable of handling.

The rush of pleasure, of ecstasy, of sheer narcotic nostalgia, takes me back to a time of papers and tests and history and drunken stumbles home from uptown bars. All the satisfaction and open promises and ease of college life is overwhelming, and you know what it reminds me of?

It reminds me of having sex with an old girlfriend.

You know what I'm talking about. We've all been there. Once a relationship ends with someone, there's always the ill-advised hook-ups, the unforeseen journeys back into something that is familiar and wonderful.

Even if it's over, and you know it's over, and you know part of it is a longing for something that doesn't exist anymore. There's a gravity to blindly having sex with someone you used to have sex with but don't anymore, and I know that sounds crass, but it's also true.

You know each other, you know about the tricks and peccadillos, you know a story and it's only your story—the two of you. And part of it is a longing for those first moments when you saw him or her and those first halting conversations when you want so desperately for this person to enjoy you, to find you interesting, to wonder what the bones in your back feel like and how you breathe when you sleep.

And if you haven't had that kind of sex, I feel very sorry for you because it's probably the best. It takes such a vast amount of pain and reckless abandon to get there.

And that, my friends, is what eating at Chicago Bagel Authority does for me. I especially like the Bricks and Ivy. It has horseradish.

Elza and Vivian Moses—102 and 97, respectively—play cards at their home in Tiskilwa, Ill. They recently celebrated their 80th wedding anniversary. MICHAEL TERCHA/TRIBUNE

Lifelong Valentines

Chicago Tribune

The year was 1927. The setting was rural Nebraska, on the eve of the Dust Bowl and the Great Depression. She was 14, a little shy and “too young to date,” she recalls. He was 19, an outgoing, blue-eyed farm boy who made his living picking corn by hand.

“We met on the dance floor,” he remembers, then turns to her for confirmation. “Wasn’t it at a dance?”

Yes, she nods and smiles.

They married in 1930, just five days after she turned 17. “A neighbor told Grandma, ‘That ain’t gonna last,’” she says.

“Everyone who knew us and our families,” he adds with a grin. “They all said it wouldn’t last.”

But Elza and Vivian Moses surprised them all. He now is 102, and she is 97. They have become minor celebrities in central Illinois since September, when they reached an astounding milestone of marital longevity: their 80th wedding anniversary.

No one tracks how many couples live long enough to mark eight decades of wedded commitment. Census statistics stop at the 50th anniversary because, according to a spokesman, “life expectancy usually doesn’t go that much longer.”

But Leonid Gavrilov, a biodemographer at the University of Chicago’s Center on Aging, used actuarial tables to estimate the chances of a couple living as long as the Moseses and also remaining married to be about one in 7 million.

“Is that a true fact?” asks Elza, raising his white, wispy eyebrows in surprise.

“You know, we are pretty fortunate,” Vivian says. “To think of all the things that happened to us, and we are still here.”

Not only are they still here, the Moseses are still remarkably healthy and living independently in Tiskilwa, a village of 780 people about 45 miles north of Peoria.

“For both of them, I think it was their first love,” says daughter Judy Speers, 65. “They always totally relied on each other. And to this day they still do.”

Same-sex marriage at heart of protest

Chicago Tribune

On the eve of Valentine’s Day, a picket line of about 60 men and women protested the Catholic Church’s views on gay marriage and other stances they see as unjust to gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender people.

One protester stood across the street from Holy Name Cathedral downtown and held a sign that read: “Catholic parents of gay kids know that all are equal before God.”

The protest, called a Freedom to Marry Day, marked the second year that gay rights activists gathered outside the cathedral around Valentine’s Day to champion gay rights and target the Catholic Church.

About a half-dozen people held placards that signaled opposition to same-sex marriage on the steps of the cathedral. Others with a ministry group sported T-shirts that read: “Love is the answer.”

Playboy Mansion under investigation

4 LOS ANGELES Los Angeles County health officials are investigating suspicions that Hugh Hefner's legendary Playboy Mansion was ground zero for a rash of mysterious respiratory ailments that afflicted people who attended a fundraiser there earlier this month.

The inquiry by the Department of Public Health follows dozens of complaints of illness after the annual DOMAINfest Global conference in Santa Monica.

The department sent an e-mail Friday to all participants warning them that the agency had received reports of a possible respiratory infection outbreak among attendees at the conference, which held events at several locations, including the Playboy Mansion.

On Saturday, a number of those who had become ill told a reporter or posted on social networking sites that they believed they had contracted the illness at the mansion fundraiser.

"An investigation into the cause and extent of illness and into potential sources of exposure is ongoing," said Sarah Kissell, a department spokeswoman. Those who reported illness complained of respiratory problems, flu-like symptoms and pneumonia.

The conference was based at the Fairmont Miramar Hotel in Santa Monica, but a Feb. 3 fundraiser was held at Hefner's Holmby Hills mansion.

David Castello, 54, who co-founded Castello Cities Internet Network Inc. with his brother Michael, said they attended the conference and fundraiser. Castello said he became ill a day after the event.

"It knocked me off my feet for five days," he said. "I'm over it now, but I'm still feeling fatigue, which is not a good thing."

Sweet nothings

For Valentine's Day, here's how we'd express our love for Chicago sports figures

RedEye

There has been a lot to love about Chicago sports since the last time Valentine's Day rolled around. We've had a Stanley Cup title, a better-than-expected Bulls team, Bears in the playoffs and business as usual in Chicago baseball.

It's enough to put us in a loving mood on this Valentine's Day. Here's what we got for some Chicago sports stars we love to love.

Derrick Rose

You'd expect a bouquet of roses for the Bulls' hometown hero? Not here. For the man who has professed his love for these little candies publicly, special Valentine's edition Skittles to add to the personal vending machine Chicago-based Wrigley Jr. Company sent him last year. They're as sweet as his game.

Adam Dunn

The White Sox's new slugger's big bat has fans dreaming of big things. The problem is, he brings a lot of strikeouts along with his homers. That's why we've gotten him a gift card for a relaxing spa package at a Chicago spot of his choice. We're hoping it gives him some patience at the plate and helps him relax a bit. Perhaps he could share it with Ozzie.

The Cubs

For the lovable losers, we have the tried-and-true: jewelry. Specifically, special replica World Series rings. Because that's likely as close as they're going to get to the real thing.

The Blackhawks

What do you get the team that won an NHL title but is well on its way to not repeating? We'll take them to a movie, maybe "Justin Bieber: Never Say Never." In fact, we'll let them watch it over and over again until they come out ready to destroy the world. Maybe that'll turn things around for them.

Jay Cutler

Roses. He took a beating after the NFC championship game loss, but he's still our boy. At least, we need him to think that if he's going to get past this and get the Bears to the Super Bowl. Isn't that what Valentine's Day is all about, making up for all the bad stuff you did to your significant other in the past year?

2 The Cubs opened camp Sunday and already they're six games back in the NL Central.	... I'm imagining Albert Pujols in a Cubs uniform next year.	... Jeff Samardzija has been sent back to Iowa.	... I'm thinking of Albert Pujols in 2011.	... we're waiting till next year.
3 What Grammy-like award would you give to a Chicago athlete or team?	I would give "Producer of the Year" to Derrick Rose, that's for damn sure.	I'd give the award for Worst Follow-up to a Hit Record to the Blackhawks.	Best Male Vocal Performance: Carlos Zambrano's soon-to-happen rant.	Jim Cornelson: Best Male Vocalist. Simple, but can you blame me?	Best Comeback: The Bears.
4 Here's where you make a joke about Tiger Woods failing to finish.	He couldn't rise to the occasion.	Yadda-yadda and he never called her again.	He just couldn't concentrate with all those spectators yelling "get in the hole."	He still was able to finish his pie at Perkins.	Mom said if you don't have anything nice to say, don't say anything at all. You could learn from her.
5 How are you celebrating the arrival of warmer weather?	Step 1: Drop your pants. Step 2: Do a dance. Note: This is how I celebrate everything.	Shoveling snow in shorts and sandals.	By roller-blading past the rows of cars still buried in massive snowbanks.	Pool parties in the potholes. Cannonball!	Ice cream Sundays.

Dempster, Hendry like Cubs’ chances of making playoffs

Dempster
PHIL VELASQUEZ/TRIBUNE

A changing of the guard at Fitch Park won’t mean a complete overhaul of the way things are done in spring training.

That was evident Sunday when the Cubs opened camp in relatively quiet fashion, with a smaller-than-normal media contingent and the absence of a few key pitchers and catchers, who were not mandated to report before Monday’s opening workout.

“I’ve been through a million spring trainings,” manager Mike Quade said. “Thirty of them anyway. It’s kind of the same. As we build into the games and the decisions get made, it will take on a different feel. But right now, I couldn’t wait to get here. It’s probably the first I’ve relaxed in two or three months, if that makes any sense at all. So it feels good.”

The Cubs will not be favorites to win the NL Central, as they have been in years past. The White Sox have stolen their thunder, and not a whole lot is expected after last year’s fifth-place finish.

But Ryan Dempster said he likes their chances of making the postseason, and while General Manager Jim Hendry is no longer talking about “kicking down the door” to the World Series, he’s opti-

Morel pushing Teahen

Life without Joe Crede at third base has been tougher than the White Sox imagined.

But now the Sox hope rookie Brent Morel can supply the exceptional defense and timely hitting Crede provided until persistent back problems led to his departure after the 2008 season.

“[Morel] will have a long, good big league career,” said Mark Teahen, who hopes to hold off the 23-year-old prospect and regain the starting third base job he lost last summer after breaking a finger on his throwing hand and struggling with his defense. “He’s a great third baseman and will hit at the big league level. It’s good to have competition. That being said, I have a job to do and I’m going to do the best I can do.”

mistic about playing in October.

“Our expectations, Mike and ours, are the same,” Hendry said. “We fully expect to be in contention in the National League Central. We felt really good about how we played at the end of last year and certainly added a few people that we think will help take that even a step further.”

BEWARE OF DOG

Whizzer takes a bite out of sports

@redeyewhizzer

Word on the street is that all-universe first baseman Albert Pujols has rejected St. Louis’ contract offer and that he will cease negotiations until the end of the year. That means Cubs fans will fall hook, line and sinker for all the Pujols-to-the-Cubs rumors that will permeate the sports landscape for the next year, kind of like the LeBron-to-Bulls talk. I say: Why not? For the Cubs, it’s always about next year anyway.

REALITY BITES

I have come to the conclusion that the Blackhawks are not going to make the playoffs. I’m not going to let them Cubs me into believing they can turn things around in the final 26 games. If they prove me wrong, great, if not, I’ll leave the disappointing to the experts: the Cubs.

NEVER AGAIN

I was rooting for the Wildcats of Northwestern last week. Then they embarrassed themselves at Michigan and at Penn State, where they scored 41 points. That’s the last time I do that. But probably not the last time they do that.

KING OF PAIN

It saddens me to report this, but Miami star LeBron James missed a key free throw in the final minute in the Heat’s loss at Boston on Sunday. Yes, LeBron, you’re the king all right. Of being overrated.

TREATED

Wayne Rooney, I’ll share my chicken leg bone with you anytime. Just don’t use it against me.

TODAY’S DOGFIGHT

» The Blackhawks assigned defenseman Nick Leddy and forward Jeff Taffe to Rockford on Sunday. In Leddy’s case, the move is a money-saving issue to create more room under the salary cap and the 19-year-old should return for Wednesday night’s game.

» Tiger Woods stumbled in a bid for his first victory in 15 months Sunday, leaving Alvaro Quiros to win the Dubai Desert Classic with a wild round that included a hole-in-one and a triple bogey. Woods had a 75 to end tied for 20th at 4-under 284.

We predict the likelihood of leaving 6 new spots alone

pickup artist's paradise

By Emily Van Zandt

Arguably the most polarizing of holidays, Valentine's Day is, at its core, a day for couples to brag and for singles to sulk. But let's not try to think that way. This town is teeming with potential hookups; you just need to know where to look. Check out our run-down on the pickup potential (on a scale of 1 to 5) of six new hot spots. Try one out this week—and don't say we never did anything nice for you.

CHUAN D. VO PHOTO FOR METROMIX

The Mid

306 N. Halsted St. 312-265-3990

The scene: What's that they say about "losing yourself in the music"? We're pretty sure it has something to do with downing vodka-Red Bulls and getting too close to strangers. The crowded dance floor and two-deep bars make this West Loop club a pickup artist's dream. Take your newly found friend up to the quieter second-floor balcony area to get to know them before you head somewhere with a little more privacy.

Pickup potential: 4

Downtown

440 N. State St. 312-464-1400

The scene: The fresh-faced all-male bartenders at this newish River North gay bar dole out drinks quickly and call everyone "honey." More casual weeknights have less hookup potential, with a smattering of solo drinkers lining the main bar, but there's more of a party vibe on weekend nights as the bar fills wall to wall and the downstairs opens for dancing.

Pickup potential: 3

Haymarket Pub & Brewery

737 W. Randolph St. 312-638-0700

The scene: While we're hesitant to say that any bar has zero potential for meeting a one-night stand, this West Loop brewery gets pretty close, thanks to its severe lack of mood lighting, and its sports-airing TVs to distract from the hot guy or gal on the next barstool over. A more likely hookup is one of the bro-mantic variety. Between the sports, bratwurst and IPAs, this spot has man date written all over it.

Pickup potential: 1

Maude's Liquor Bar

840 W. Randolph St. 312-243-9712

The score: This good-looking West Loop bar/eatery hybrid has been packed to the brim with equally good-looking patrons since its January opening. Dim lighting, close seating and French-inspired food options make the main floor a great place to impress a date. For an even cozier vibe, snag a seat in the upstairs lounge and strike up a conversation with the cuties at the table next to you. Bottom line: French is sexy. Just don't go around quoting "Lady Marmalade."

Bonny's

2417 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-486-8480

The scene: Two words: Late night. After 2 a.m., the chances of heading home with a fellow bargoer increase exponentially by the half-hour. Hit last call at this upgraded dive in Logan Square (open till 4 a.m. daily and 5 a.m. Saturdays) and we're not sure you'd even need words to seal the deal. Just point at your intended conquest and see where the morning takes you.

Pickup potential: 5

Angels and Kings

230 N. Michigan Ave. 312-334-6463

The score: It takes the most skillful of schmoozers to get away with macking on someone at a hotel bar without seeming like a creep. But if you're lucky enough to make a connection at this intimate rock 'n' roll lair of a bar inside the Hard Rock Hotel, you're only a few steps away from "someplace more comfortable." We witnessed the bar's magic firsthand on a recent Thursday when a couple couldn't seem to keep their hands (and lips) off each other in the back booth. And it was only 8:30 p.m.

Pickup potential: 4

GRAMMY WHAMMY

Performances take center stage in otherwise tame ceremony

By Curt Wagner

REDEYE

The 53rd annual Grammy Awards dazzled with over-the-top performances, but the CBS broadcast was one of the tamer Grammy ceremonies in recent years.

Still, Lady Gaga “hatched” from an egg that could have been laid by a peacock-feathered Cee Lo Green. Justin Bieber lost the best new artist honor to a little-known jazz singer. And Mick Jagger turned in one of the best performances of the night.

So yes, there were surprises.

One of the biggest was Eminem, who led the field with 10 nominations and was expected to bask in Grammy love after chronicling his addiction problems on the album “Recovery.” He walked away with just two trophies, for rap album and rap solo performance. Arcade Fire won album of the year over the rapper, while Lady Antebellum’s “Need You Now” beat him out for best song and record of the year.

Another shocker came from rising jazz star Esperanza Spalding, who beat Bieber, Mumford & Sons, Drake and Florence and the Machine to win best new artist.

But the Grammy ceremony is all about the performances, and the stars delivered. Lady Gaga was carried over the red carpet and into the Staples Center encased in an egg as dancers escorted her to the stage. After “hatching,” she performed her new song, “Born This Way.” But the singer was out-Gaga’d by Green, who performed “Forget You” with Gwyneth Paltrow and puppets.

Check out RedEye’s take on some of the other performances.

ARETHA FRANKLIN TRIBUTE

It’s like the Three Stooges elbowing each other out of the way with all that now-check-out-what-my-voice-can-do oversinging going on. Only Jennifer Hudson and Florence Welch provide the kind of soul that truly honors Aretha Franklin. MATT PAIS

GAGA

Oh, now it makes sense. Lady Gaga arrives onstage and hatches from an egg because she was “Born This Way.” Although, we’re pretty sure she wasn’t born with pointy shoulders. At any rate, her head-scratching performance, complete with disembodied heads atop her organ, won’t make us forget that “Born This Way” is a ripoff of Madonna’s “Express Yourself.” BRIAN MOORE

DR. DRE, EMINEM,
RIHANNA, SKYLAR
GREY & ADAM LEVINE

Dr. Dre isn’t rusty, but his verse on Eminem’s “I Need A Doctor” was closer to a very mild temperature than a fever. Rihanna howled expertly for “Love the Way You Lie” but didn’t have enough time to contrast her softness with the hardness of Em, whose outfit looked eerily similar to Justin Bieber’s. Mr. Mathers barked aggression in the same way he always does, struggling to connect in between the words bleeped out by the network. (By the way, CBS, you missed an F-bomb.) MATT PAIS

MORE REVIEWS

MUSE

And Muse brings a little bit of rock ‘n’ roll. While “Uprising” is the epitome of catchy, it’s a surprisingly flat performance. Not even the fake stage-crashers could spice up the performance. Maybe it’s because each member was glued to his spot onstage. Still, it’s always good to hear a screeching electric guitar. BRIAN MOORE

BRUNO MARS, B.O.B. AND JANELLE MONAE

Well, one out of three ain’t bad. After an uninspired snippet of B.o.B. and Mars’ “Nothin’ On You,” Mars obnoxiously labors to turn “Grenade” into an old-school soul tune. Only Monae, singing the hell out of “Cold War” while B.o.B. pretends to play guitar, demonstrates effortless star power. MATT PAIS

RIHANNA, DRAKE

For the second time of the night, Rihanna’s performance featured flames in the background. This time, it was justified: Her back-and-forth come-on with Drake in “What’s My Name?” was full of desire and, uh, thrusting, for a captivating and sexual performance that actually communicated its song’s heat. If you weren’t in the mood for something steamy on Valentine’s Day, you are now. MATT PAIS

MICK JAGGER WITH RAPHAEL SAADIQ

Paying tribute to the late, great Solomon Burke on Burke’s “Everybody Needs Somebody to Love,” ageless Rolling Stone Mick Jagger owned the stage like few others did all night, strutting and wailing and adopting the persona of soulman and master of ceremonies. Invigorating. MATT PAIS

CEE LO GREEN, GWYNETH PALTROW & THE MUPPETS

No one is going to forget Cee Lo Green’s, um, channeling of Elton John, although he forgot some of the lyrics to “Forget You.” The singer, decked out like a big red bird (or a Mardi Gras drag queen), rocks a clean version of his hit with Gwyneth Paltrow and the Muppets. Downside: We think the Muppets were lip-synching. CURT WAGNER

JUSTIN BIEBER

Cue tween girls’ screams: Justin Bieber does “Baby” on a stool with an acoustic guitar. Hold on, you mean he has actual talent? He’s not following the stereotype. Then he ruins it by lip-synching to “Never Say Never” with a surprise appearance by Jaden Smith before Usher puts us out of our misery with “OMG.” They truly are the Axis of Evil. BRIAN MOORE

KATY PERRY

Her floating hearts-peppered version of “Teenage Dream” capitalized on the song’s irresistible hook, even if Perry barely moved for a dance that barely existed in the first place. Worse: The ballad “Not Like the Movies,” on which Perry seemed to hope that her sparkly outfit and short skirt would distract from a voice that hit about 40 percent of the notes. No. MATT PAIS

ARCADE FIRE

Hey, a rock band! The Canadian outfit rolled through “Month of May” with the full force of two drum kits, yelping enhanced by a megaphone, and a stage show enlivened by guys riding bikes simply for the sake of capturing footage on helmet cams. The rollicking sound was almost enough to make you forget the light show clearly was intended to induce worldwide blindness. They came back for an encore after winning album of the year. MATT PAIS

REDEYE TAKES THE TEMPERATURE OF GRAMMYS FASHION

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Since Sunday's Grammy Awards were supposed to be about the power of an artist's voice, some stars went way out of their way to make sure the red carpet was burning up with fashion. RedEye measured the heat index of Sunday's show to see who was smokin'—and which artists fizzled out. Visit redeyechicago.com/whoville for even more!

Hot mess

Ciara

Try to take in every detail of this getup in just one eyeful. You can't. The bodice is insane. The skirt has no shape. And the shoes belong in a bondage situation.

Tropical thunder

Nicki Minaj

Sunday's award for trying to out-Gaga Lady Gaga goes to Minaj, who managed to squeeze as many versions of leopard print ... something ... into an outfit as humanly possible.

Super sizzlin'

Rihanna

We've seen Ri-Ri in bandage-type outfits before, but she softened the look into something like the feather duster from "Beauty and the Beast." Ryan Seacrest certainly appreciated it.

Orange hot

Bonnie McKee

This songwriter—and her flaming hair—showed off in a phoenix-like outfit that complimented her alabaster skin.

Hot pants

Ricky Martin

Martin left his straight pants at home this year, and we're not really sure how he sat down in these. Or whether they're made of duct tape.

Burned out

John Mayer

Mayer woke up Sunday morning, had breakfast, sat on the couch and watched some TV, then remembered sometime around 2:30 p.m. that the Grammys were that night.

BIRTHDAY!

Aquarius

Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Four planets in your sign are giving you more confidence than ever. If you've been lusting after someone, this is the time to give him or her a call and offer a steamy invitation. Don't sit back waiting for love to find you.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

The sun is moving into your sign, and this will bring you healing and personal renewal. You'll feel better about the weirdness of your love life and the unpredictability of your career situation. Things will get better soon.

Aries March 21-April 19

Someone wants all of your attention, and you're feeling resentful. Your bipolar friend is going through a manic phase. Your former flame needs you to pleasure him day and night. Saturn is reminding you it's OK to say no.

Taurus April 20-May 20

The sun says you need to be more attentive to your lover. If she's screaming for more foreplay, don't you think you should try to indulge her? Or if he's craving a steamy hookup in a public place, give it a try.

Gemini May 21-June 21

Several people are interested in you, and you're enjoying the attention. In your usual fashion, you'll probably end up sleeping with three people simultaneously. Mercury is enhancing your need to lose yourself in sexual oblivion.

Cancer June 22-July 22

Sometimes you're so busy having a relationship with a fantasy figure that you fail to engage with the real person in your life. The moon says it's time to focus on this soul mate.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

With the sun finishing up some funny business opposite your sign, you're feeling bruised and abused. Relationships have gone kablooe. While you deal with chaos, don't lose your cool.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

The sun could put a hot flirtation on hold. Just when you thought somebody was going to tie you up and ravish you, he has to go out of town. Or right when you were certain that gorgeous girl was going to date you, her ex-fiance shows up. Patience will pay off.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

Pay attention to sudden impulses or psychic flashes. Your intuition is being enhanced by Neptune. You might call someone up out of the blue, and it will turn out that he just broke up with someone and needs a shoulder to cry on.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

You could be struggling to find a way to communicate with someone. The moon is saying to keep working at it. There could still be some mixed signals and miscommunication, but if you remain persistent, you'll make a powerful connection.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Your friends might be wondering what has gotten into you. You're using the wrong substances, and sleeping with someone who is totally wrong for you. But Mars is still helping you have major fun.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Sentimental Venus is filling your head with lusty day-dreams. You're thinking about the one who got away. The question is: what will you do about it?

From 'Shore' to Chicago

Ronnie, Vinny bring T-shirt time to Windy City clubs

about last night

LUIS ARROYAVE
larroyave@tribune.com

GOT A TIP?

Do you have a hot tip on a celebrity sighting in Chicago? E-mail Luis or tweet him @luisarroyave.

America's obsession with "Jersey Shore" wasn't supposed to last this long.

The MTV reality show was going to be a one-season wonder, according to some critics, and then The Situation was supposed to fade back into obscurity, only to re-emerge on VH1's "Celebrity Fit Club" 10 years later and 40 pounds heavier.

And yet, here we are midway through Season 3, which has brought MTV record ratings, with a fourth season filming in Italy this spring.

Chicagoans aren't above "Jersey Shore" hysteria. Ronnie Ortiz-Magro took so many photos with female fans during his appearance at Manor on Friday, he told one fan he needed a break because the camera flash was making him dizzy. Vinny Guadagnino's appearance at Enclave in the early hours Sunday attracted one of the largest crowds the River North club has seen for a celebrity appearance—and this is a club that has booked the Black Eyed Peas, Usher and Kim Kardashian.

"I'm still the same old dude—people just want to take photos with me now," said Vinny, who strolled into Enclave after midnight sporting sunglasses. "I started this when I was 21 years old. Naturally, there is going to be some change. I'm definitely more confident, but I'm not cocky. I still get scared talking to girls."

MATT REEVES/DARKROOM DEMONS

Producers of the show knew they couldn't rely on the same formula forever, which is why they're taking the self-proclaimed guidos and guidettes to Italy for Season 4. Vinny, whose mother was born in Italy but who never has been there himself, said he speaks only a little Italian—which is more than he can say for his cast mates.

"We're American, and have never really been in that situation before, so it's going to be an adjustment," he said. "We have to be in it together now."

What will it be like filming with on-again-off-again couple Ronnie and Sammi Giancola?

"The good part is maybe we can divert attention off of that because we're going to be fighting to survive rather than worrying about stupid stuff like that," Vinny said.

And while some of his cast mates have branched out with spinoff TV shows, books and other business ventures, Vinny isn't as antsy to leave the show that has made him a star.

"This has become such a phenomenon, I would do as many [seasons] as they want," he said. "It would be silly not to."

Charlie Sheen (left) sure has a million-dollar smile. When the "Two and a Half Men" star flashed a grin during an event in L.A. last week, Us magazine's cameras caught a glimpse of several gold teeth. Sheen, who's on hiatus from the show for drug rehab, didn't comment on the gilded grinders. GETTY IMAGES FILE PHOTO

All the Haze-y ladies

Aw, Chet Haze is a romantic. The Northwestern rapper and son of Tom Hanks is releasing "Get Hazed," an eight-song mixtape, on Monday via facebook.com/chethaze. "For all the ladies, it's gonna be their Valentine's Day present," Haze told RedEye over the weekend. "And for just the rap game in general, it's going to be the St. Valentine's Day massacre."

Ready to take a ride? "Cash Cab Chicago" debuts at 5:30 p.m. Monday on the Discovery Channel, the Tribune reports. Second City Touring Company alumna Beth Melewska (left) will serve as quizmaster and driver on the show, in which passengers try to win money while avoiding getting booted from the cab.

The Justin Bieber juggernaut has hit a wall. The pop star's movie, "Never Say Never," earned $30.3 million over the weekend and was a close second at the box office to the Adam Sandler-Jennifer Aniston rom-com "Just Go With It," which earned $31 million, according to The Associated Press.
